Description

Glutamine is a non-essential amino acid, which means the body is able to synthesize it. Nonetheless, in certain circumstances your body may need more Glutamine than it can make. In these cases, taking a Glutamine supplement may be helpful. Being an amino acid, Glutamine constitutes a building block of essential proteins such as those found in muscles and in the immune system. Our L-Glutamine is free-form, which is the same form that our body synthesizes.
